

RIVER OF ANGELS

A Novel of Cultural and Environmental Conflict

River of Angels explores contemporary issues of drug dealing, prostitution, urban growth, and environmental destruction while vividly portraying complicated relationships in which nothing is as simple as it seems. When a prostitute is beaten on a Caribbean Island, no one realized that this seemingly minor event will light a fuse to blow apart the old, corrupt social order. Pursuing healing for the wounded young woman and for other poor workers, members of the community become targets of ruthless entrepreneurs planning to reap big profits while despoiling the island's rich environment. Generations of Secrets, Book 1

www.abberolnick.com

Publisher: Sedro Publishing

ISBN: 978-0-9845119-8-3

Price: $14.95

Format: Paperback

Other Formats: ebook

Available from Small Press United/

IPG, Ingram, Baker and Taylor

“Rolnick weaves a story of tangled relationship and intrigue on a tropical island. . . where everyone struggles.”

--Chuck Robinson, Co-Owner, Village Books, Bellingham, WA

“The sights and smells are rich in themselves, but the characters are what make this book come to life. . . with cultural nuances, facts and stories. . . All are treated with a combination of respect, curiosity, wonder, and affection that ensures they will endure.”

--Joan Arioldi, Whatcom County Library Director

Abbe Rolnick grew up in Baltimore and experienced her first major cultural jolt at age 15 when her family moved to Miami Beach, Florida. History came alive with her exposure to Cuban culture. After attending Boston University, she lived in Puerto Rico, where she owned a bookstore. River of Angels, flowing from her experiences there, is the first novel in a series that continues with Color of Lies and Founding Stones. Abbe resides with her husband Jim on twenty acres in Skagit Valley, Washington.

abbe rolnick
teller of tales, lover of life

Connect with Abbe Online:

